LEADERS, BUT NO ARMY.

The present campaign presents to the observant voter the singular spectacle of a lot of leaders, carrying banners, riding horses, waving swords and issuing orders, but with no army in sight. The old party leaders have been so accustomed to march at the head of a serried host of voters that they have not taken the trouble to look behind them.

They make so much noise, with the party drum and tom tom, that the lack of the regular tramp of the old army has not as yet attracted their attention.

Cleveland is marching along with his head in the air leading the National Committees along the dusty road. Could he but look behind him he would see a vacant space where once was massed the solid battalions of Georgia, Alabama, Texas and the Carolinas, and the thinned ranks in the other States, show the terrible inroads made in the solid South by Weaver.

In New York the mailed hosts of Tammany are no longer shouting with the old acclaim, but sharpening their knives on Manhattan Island, ready to stab the ticket.

Harrison is leading—with the same happy unconsciousness of the weakness of his forces—a demoralized remnant of what was once recognized as the Grand Old Party, and he cannot look in any direction and recognize a Field Marshal that he dare trust.

He has snubbed the men who four years ago were leading the charges for him in Indiana and New York, and now the ingratitude and snob-bishness of his past acts rise to confront him.

There is no call to arms in Indiana, Illinois is dead to the party needs, and the blood of the Carnegie riots is the seed of the church from which is preached the Gospel of discontent in Pennsylvania.

The people have read the old platforms and platitudes, which have humbugged them so often and they are no longer beguiled by the sad melodies, of a tariff protection which does not protect, or lured by the free trade harmonies, sounded from the lute of Henry Watterson, charm he never so wisely.

The public, weary of the rule of Wall street, and alarmed at the rapidly accumulating power of the monopolies, turn away from these old blind party guides, and call for free silver, a larger circulating medium, and better times.

This is why the mass of voters, breaking the party shackles are flocking to the banner hoisted by General Weaver and the People's Party.

The Silver State will present the Silver party of the county which cast the largest percentage of the county's vote for Weaver and Field, or the silver electoral ticket, a superb silk banner, costing not less than one hundred dollars.

Ormsby County is in need of just such a banner.

Any man who sticks his head up for office in this State must be made to answer the question in the next twenty-five days: Who of all the candidates do you favor for President?—Silver State.

That's the sort of talk brother Nixon.

If silver continues to depreciate the Mt. Diablo Mine at Candalaria may have a close down. It was the intention of the Holmes Mining Co. to resume operations in that mine this month but the low price of silver does not warrant it.

On the 4th the Mt. Diablo shipped six bars of bullion valued at $3,500.
